

THE STARVING ARTIST

NOVEMBER 2007 NEWSLETTER

What is The Starving Artist Theatre?

A non-profit organization, The Starving Artist theatre was designed to encourage and support artists. With a passion for the undiscovered, our goal is to impact the Washington DC metro area with local talent! The theatre will produce events to better Northern Virginia's fine arts programs; offering superior and inventive forms of the liberal arts.

This will be done by exposing quality artists to hungry audiences tired of the average production. The Starving Artist will provide a place for the artist to be seen, heard, and believed in... giving them the confidence to pursue their dream and develop it into a career!

Happy Thanksgiving From The Starving Artist Theatre!!

The Starving Artist wishes all of its supporters a happy holiday season! The theatre is ending another successful year and is looking forward to 2008. The last production of "To Catch a Man" this past June was the theatre's most successful event to date. The show reached new audiences and received critical acclaim from the National Endowment for the Arts, stating that the play was "charming" and "very funny". The next production is scheduled for this February featuring the new play "A Replacement for Mr. Lucifer" by Katherine Dubois. Making its DC debut, this hilarious production tests the moral boundaries of one couple as they get entangled into a plot to overthrow Satan. Look for more details coming soon!
